Microworld sales are up by over 30 percent

People are ready to spend on getting their systems protected against the latest virus attacks.

/24-7PressRelease.com/ - Michigan, February 3, 2005

Microworld has reported that its sales are up by over 30 percent in the last quarter alone, adding it is a clear indication that people are ready to spend on getting their systems protected against the latest virus attacks.

According to Govind Rammurthy, CEO, Microworld, "Security softwares are slowly becoming ubiquitous and Microworld, with its 'personalized 24-hour service', is fully geared to take care of all customers, small and large. The increase in sales only goes on to prove the ever-increasing confidence of our customers in Microworld."

The company has seen an increase in sales not only from its corporate customers, but also from home users and Sohos. People are getting more security-conscious and are willing to spend money to protect their systems and more importantly their personal data, the company stated.

The year 2004 saw an increase in the number of virus attacks as compared to the years gone by. The number of virus attacks has not only increased, but the speed at which they spread around the world has grown by leaps and bounds, the antivirus provider said.

In addition to the increase of virus attacks, there are attacks from other sources like spyware and spam. Spywares have been recognized as the most dangerous of them all. It is a general term used to describe software that runs on users computers and performs actions that the consumer considers undesirable or hostile.

To combat this growing problem from spywares, Microworld recently introduced the spyware detection and removal tool with its top-selling eScan range of real-time antivirus and content security products.

Microworld provides 24x7 free online support and also hourly updates to all its customers so that they get the most recent software.
