Right from the day one, MicroWorld believed in proactive and preventive security concepts for enterprises and home users alike, and thereby developed a revolutionary technology named MWL (MicroWorld Winsock Layer) to power its products. This technology empowers eScan and MailScan to clean files at the socket level and thereby saves the need to write the data to temporary folders before scanning.

“Being a comprehensive security solution addressing a vast spectra of threats, and still remain the most advanced in each of those segments at the same time, may look like tight-rope walk, especially at a time when niche products are booming. However, with a fundamentally strong technology and consistent innovation, that's a standard we continuously excel,” reveals Govind Rammurthy, CEO, MicroWorld Technologies.

“Crossing the one million mark is a huge milestone in our endeavor to secure the web for computer users. But it also reminds us about the vast majority who still remain unprotected and under protected from various threats. I'm sure we will draw inspiration from this breakthrough, to spread our security cover in length and breadth in order to add real confidence to computing for them,” envisioned Govind Rammurthy.
