Added: (Mon Dec 19 2005)

Alice, Anna or Susan, This Trojan Has Some Pretty Names!

A new variant of the Bagle Trojan horse is found to be proliferating through widespread spamming. Troj/BagleDI-AN trojan comes to your mailbox with an attachment named Alice, Anna, Susan etc containing a venomous file called S3700020.EXE. The message body of some mails, reads "New Year's Day",

What it does

Once you run the file, it copies itself to the Windows system folder by the name ANTI_TROJ.EXE. Infiltrating further into the windows system, it smartly tricks the user by displaying an image "NTIMAGE.GIF" using the default image viewer, by making him/her believe that the execution of the file only opens an image file.

The BagleDI-AN tries to download a file from various sites. This file is saved in a folder named EXEFLD in Windows folder.
